BRUSSELS AIRLINES (SN) JOINED THE JOINT VENTURE WITH SQ & LHG

Brussels Airlines (SN) is now fully integrated into the Singapore Airlines (SIA) and Lufthansa Group (LHG) Joint Venture (JV), alongside LX, OS, and LH. This integration harmonizes pricing, simplifies codeshare flight options, and makes sales easier for travel agents already familiar with the JV.

With this move, SIA and LHG now offer even more travel options, including connections from secondary points in the DACH region via Brussels (BRU), expanding options from cities SIA does not directly serve.

Enjoy seamless travel solutions for your customers with the enhanced network!

CHANGE IN TICKETING TIME LIMIT (TTL) SETTINGS

From 01. September 2025, Singapore Airlines will align its Ticketing Time Limit (TTL) settings with the Point of Commencement (POC) logic used (refer to Hot News #07) to determine inventory availability across all channels.

What's changing:

- The TTL will now be calculated based on where the journey starts – the Point of Commencement (POC)
- To mitigate potential servicing issues, warning and cancellation notices (OPW/OPC) will still be shown in the travel agent's local time zone.

Example Scenario:

- A German travel agent books a Singapore to Bangkok flight (SINBKK) on 01. September 2025. The flight departs on 01. October 2025 (30 days later).
- Since the journey starts in Singapore, the TTL will follow Singapore's POC rule.
Under these rules:
 - For a booking 30 days before departure, the TTL is 10 days.
 - OPW (warning) will be sent on 08. September 2025, at 23: 00 German local time
 - OPC (cancellation) will occur on 11. September 2025, at 23:00 German local time

This ensures that while the TTL rules follow the POC (Singapore), warnings and cancellations remain in the agent's local time zone to avoid service disruptions.

The relocation affects all three daily flights between Singapore and Phnom Penh: SQ154, SQ156, and SQ158 from Singapore to Phnom Penh, as well as SQ153, SQ155, and SQ157 from Phnom Penh to Singapore.

Important!

- ❖ There will be no changes to the flight numbers or scheduled timings.

- ❖ Revalidation will not be permitted for booking changes from PNH to KTI.
- ❖ Customers who have yet to book their tickets and plan to travel to or from Phnom Penh before 09. September 2025 and return on or after 09. September 2025, are advised to book separate one-way flights, or use the multi/city option.

Techo International Airport is located approximately 23km from the south of Phnom Penh city centre, and customers are advised to plan their journey accordingly.

SIA check-in counters will close one hour prior to departure.
